Myths vs Facts

of Outsourced Credentialing and Enrollment

01

MYTH

Outsourcing to a Credentials Verification Organization (CVO) means I'll lose control of the process

FACT

You stay in control of provider approvals while the CVO manages the time-consuming work. The right partner offers transparency, shared accountability, and trust, so you can move faster while protecting compliance, quality, and patient safety.

02

MYTH

Outsourcing delivers no immediate ROI

FACT

Outsourcing speeds the credentialing and enrollment process and lightens staffing needs. Faster onboarding means providers can deliver care and bill for services sooner. Many organizations see faster revenue capture and some report time savings of up to 75% — with measurable ROI, often within weeks of getting started.

03

MYTH

CVOs are just for backlog cleanup

FACT

A trusted CVO is more than a transactional service — they foster long-term partnerships with healthcare practices. Beyond credentials verification, services can include enrollment, licensure tracking, delegated credentialing, and committee support, freeing internal teams for higher-value work.

CLOSE

With staff shortages and credentialing standards tightening, the risks of tackling credentialing and enrollment entirely in-house are growing. Outsourcing to a trusted CVO is a smart investment in your organization's future.
